

Spanish Piano Cave

Text by Bryan Signorelli • Photos by Lawrence Ireland

In late January 2007, Shaun Baker and myself met up with Walter Meurer, Lawrence Ireland and Lawrence's wife in order to clarify some details in the Big Room of Spanish Piano Cave.

While Walter sketched a cross section, Lawrence and his wife took photos and looked for biology. Meanwhile, Shaun and I used a Disto A3 to gather ceiling height data and clarified some ceiling change information.

Clockwise from top: Lawrence's wife (green), Shaun Baker (red) and Bryan Signorelli (yellow). Looking down a waterfall. Bryan and Shaun gathering ceiling height data.

Clockwise from above: This is the entrance to the cave taken from the parking lot. Walt schools some young-uns in a game of pool. The Great Room (during the wet season.) The view from the entrance showing the helipad. The flowstone formation known as the Spanish Piano.

