

Cave and Karst Science

The Transactions of the British Cave Research Association

Volume 33

Number 2

For 2006

Cave surveying: binocular vision disorders
White Scar Cave, North Yorkshire, UK
Predation among Gammarus pulex
Phreatic caves in Swaledale, UK
H W Haywood's cave images
Epigeal tectonic inception
Symposium abstracts
Forum

Cave and Karst Science, 2006 Issue 33(2)

The effect of binocular vision disorders on cave surveying accuracy. Dougherty, M., 51–54.

The hydrogeology of crystalline rocks as supporting evidence for tectonic inception in some epigeal endokarsts. Faulkner, T., 55–64.

Further phreatic cave systems in Swaledale, North Yorkshire, UK. Harrison, T., 65–72.

Intra-specific predation and survivorship of Gammarus pulex (Crustacea: Amphipoda) within aquatic karstic habitats. Little, S., Haslehurst, T., and Wood, P.J., 73–76.

White Scar Cave, Chapel-le-Dale, North Yorkshire, England. Craven, S., 77–86.

Cave and karst images: the rediscovery of an important historical record. Nixon, G., 87–88.

Forum, 89–96